WHEELING, FEBRUARY 11, 1895.

Pass the Fish and Game Law.

One of the most important bills now pending in the legislature is the fish and game law, of which Mr. Brady, of this county, is the patron, and which has passed its third reading in the house. The bill should pass in its original shape, for it was designed for the protection of our fish and game, which, without proper laws, are rapidly becoming extinct.

The bill did not propose to repeal the law, now in force, preventing the shipping of deer and wild turkeys out of the state, and the amendment aiming at that very wise provision should not be adopted by the legislature. Previous to its passage a few years ago deer and turkeys were very scarce in West Virginia, owing to the great numbers that were killed and shipped to outside markets, but since the law has been in force, they have rapidly increased, and under a wise protective law will before long be as plentiful as ever.

If our deer and turkeys are to be shipped to foreign markets, hundreds of hunters will go into the business, and it will be but a short time until this game will be exterminated, a result which the people of the state would not welcome.

There are many reasons in favor of the passage of the bill under consideration. No one will deny, in the first place, that there is a necessity for such a law, for our fish and game have not now sufficient protection from the danger of extinction. In the second place, our neighboring states are enforcing such protective laws, while their citizens who live on the borders of West Virginia are permitted to enter this state and carry away large quantities of our fish and small game. It is, therefore, apparent that it is time for our legislature to adopt stringent measures for the preservation of the fish and game of our streams and forests, and provide for their rigid enforcement by the authorities.

The experience of the West, which once abounded in large game of all kinds, but which is no longer the hunter's paradise, should be a lesson to us. There were no proper laws for the protection of the buffalo that were in such vast numbers on the plains, and they were exterminated in a few years by wanton sportsmen who killed them for the mere fun of killing. The same can be said of the smaller game that was so plentiful before "westward the star of empire took its way," and unless West Virginia adopts protective measures without delay the same will be written of her before many years. The bill now pending, if it becomes a law, will prove a popular measure with the people.

In regard to the proposition to do away with the provision of law that prevents the shipping of deer out of the state, and restricts their killing, attention of the members of legislature is called to the benefits that Germany is reaping to-day from her wise policy of preserving her deer. The following paragraph from the Bloomington Pantagraph is worthy of a thoughtful reading:

United States Consul-General DeKay at Berlin has been making some timely suggestions in a report to the state department with reference to the propagation of deer in the parks and forest reserves of this country. Dr. DeKay says the abundance, excellence and cheapness of venison cannot fail to interest all who visit Germany. It is a common dish all the year around, and the price is so moderate that all classes eat it. The reason he gives for this is the high cultivation of forestry in Germany, and the care in which deer are bred, fed and protected from poachers. Considering the excellence of venison as food, and the small cost of rearing deer under protection, the consul suggests that it be America especially that steps should be taken to establish practical deer parks. In the neighborhood of nearly all our great cities, he says, there are large tracts that could easily be utilized for this purpose. It is strange how the people have allowed this beautiful game to be almost annihilated throughout the country by bot hunters, when we might excel the world in its propagation. We ought to get back what we have lost, and make it possible for our people to eat venison as they do in Germany, rather than content themselves with looking on a "saddle" from the Rocky mountains during the Christmas holidays, retelling at twenty-five cents a pound, and only looking at it as a natural curiosity by the great majority of the population.

Similar measures adopted in West Virginia would be a step in advance. In the meantime, let us have the fish and game law proposed. The people of the state are practically unanimous for it, and its adoption is a duty of the legislature. Let it not be said that West Virginia is behind her sister states in this matter.

The Democratic legislature in Tennessee is determined to consummate the conspiracy to steal the governorship. The method resorted to bears a strong likeness to that which was adopted by a Democratic legislature to perpetrate a similar outrage.

Another aged Kentuckian, Col. Cody Bowen, aged 97, has followed the example of Gen. Cassius M. Clay and taken unto himself a child-wife. The girl in this instance is only seventeen years of age. A romantic feature was that the veteran and his bride eloped from the poor house, of which they were both inmates.

The Responsibility.

A sample of the recklessness with which some Democratic papers are discussing the financial situation, in their partisan zeal to relieve the Democratic majority in Congress from the responsibility, is the following extract from the Grafton Leader:

The Democrats cannot be held responsible for these financial straits when many of them are busily trying to do something while some of their number and all of the Republicans are obstructing everything.

It was once thought that a man elected to Congress owed a duty to the country and the people; but now his highest obligation is to his party or some wing of it.

In the midst of the present financial distress Republicans refuse to do anything for fear that a good measure may be adopted and may give prestige to the Democrats.

Intelligent people who are watching events at Washington will be struck with the ridiculousness of this assumption. The best refutation of the charge of partisanship on the Republican side in the face of the crisis is found in an analysis of the vote by which the administration bond bill was defeated in the house last Thursday.

When the vote was taken on the bill, which was introduced in compliance with the President's recommendation, to afford relief to the treasury, forty-four Republicans and ninety Democrats voted for it, and fifty-six Republicans and ninety-seven Democrats voted against it. In other words, more Democrats voted against the Democratic administration relief measure than voted for it, while nearly half the Republican strength, led by Mr. Reed, came to its support.

Had a fair majority of the Democratic majority in the house stood by the Democratic administration, the measure would have passed the house, for there were enough Republicans favoring it to pull it through.

It will not be hard for even the Leader to figure out where the responsibility lies for the defeat of the bill. With more than half the President's party in Congress against him, Republicans cannot be fairly charged with the blame for the present situation.

No Outrage.

The Register is working itself into a ferment because the legislature proposes to knock the free trade partisan feature out of the political economy taught in our public schools. As it is not proposed to substitute a partisan protection feature in its place, the Register is unduly excited over the matter, and the public will fail to see where the "outrage," our contemporary speaks of, comes in.

There is no outrage in placing in the public schools non-partisan text books on civil government. The outrage is only upon the Register's free trade feelings.

The Register's prediction that those who would soon be sick of their bag of last November is coming true even earlier than we had anticipated.—Register.

Did the very recent city election demonstrate it? What other opportunity have the people hereabouts had to express a change of heart since last November? The Register must establish a reputation for reliability as a political prophet before it can expect much credence to be given to such statements as the above.

SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS LEWIS is a writer of ability and is doubtless well equipped to compile a history of West Virginia that would prove an acceptable text book for the schools, but the house of delegates does not see why it should contract for it in advance of its preparation. Such an action would clearly be unbusinesslike.

BREAKFAST BUDGET.

It appears that in Japan one factor entering into the problem of the choice of a daughter-in-law is her skill in raising silkworms. The thread spun by the silkworm is said to be regular and even in proportion as the worm has been regularly and carefully fed. The prospective mother-in-law carefully and minutely examines the evenness of the silk thread in the material of the garments worn by the young lady before giving her assent to the betrothal.

The bones of a mastodon have been found recently on the Kupuk farm, near North Liberty, Ind., in clay soil, eight and one-half feet below the surface. Above was sand and gravel. The tusks were eight and one-half feet long, and the teeth weighed from five and one-fourth to six pounds apiece. About one-fourth of the bones of the animal were dug out, and are on exhibition in North Liberty.

BOSTON '95.

The Great Christian Endeavor Convention to Be Held in July.

The fourteenth International Christian Endeavor convention is to be held in Boston, Mass., July 10-14, 1895, and Christian Endeavorers are hard at work laying plans for the proper care and entertainment of the expected thousands.

The attendance at the convention is estimated all the way from 40,000 to double that number, but it is safe to say 60,000 delegates will attend under favorable conditions.

In the entertainment of delegates the Christian Endeavor plan will prevail, each delegate paying his or her own expenses. Same will be quartered in hotels, some in apartment houses, hundreds in the New England Conservatory of Music and similar places, while the vast majority will go to private houses.

As far as possible each state will be given headquarters in some church, after the manner of the Cleveland convention, and the society in that church will see to it that the delegates from that state are made happy and comfortable.

By this arrangement committees can meet, friends confer, and instead of a general registration place in the main convention hall the delegates from each state will register at the different churches assigned them, and letters for the delegates can be addressed to the state headquarters instead of having a general postoffice, which has heretofore caused considerable annoyance.

Mechanics' hall has been leased in its entirety, comprising three halls: the main hall seating about 8,000, cotillion hall which will be used as Massachusetts headquarters, and exhibition hall which will be used as a huge restaurant. In addition two tents accommodating 10,000 each have been leased. They will be made waterproof, and will be put up under the supervision of the makers. In addition the largest churches in the district will be used, accommodating 8,000 more people, making the total seating capacity 30,000.

White and crimson have been adopted by the Boston Christian Endeavor Union as official colors for the convention, and citizens and business houses generally will decorate.

The printing committee is now at work on securing a suitable badge for the occasion. It may be they are halting between two opinions, a beanpot and a hub. They are open to designs and suggestions from anyone interested.

It is too early to give any definite plan as to the reception of delegates but suffice it to say that the reception committee is already hard at work, and all delegates will be met at the stations and wharves and personally conducted to the various state headquarters, where other guides will be found to take the delegates to their respective convention homes.

Sugar Planters Not the Only Sufferers.

To the Editor of the Intelligencer.
 Sir:—I see by your paper the bad plight of the sugar planters of the south and it is right for our newspapers to defend the rights of the oppressed of other states. At the same time they should do the same for our own oppressed wool growers of the state of West Virginia, who are as badly oppressed as the sugar planters of the south, but I don't see any suggestions in the newspapers for the relief of the farmer. Any one can see the number of trustee sales and sheriff sales in the country. Something ought to be done to relieve our farmers that are in debt. The state grant presented a resolution to our legislature for the relief of mortgaged farms from taxation to the amount of the mortgage, but I suppose it has been thrown in the waste basket where all such legislation went when we had a Democratic legislature. I wish in behalf of farmers so oppressed the INTELLIGENCER would urge the passage of some law for the relief of these people. It is certainly wrong to tax a man on what he does not own, and give the man that holds the mortgage on his farm a chance to escape taxation entirely.
